8502 BOSTON JEWELER'S GRANDFATHER CLOCK

Less than six of the Jeweler's Regulator No. 61 made by Boston's E. Howard Clock Co. in 1880 are known to exist today. They are treasured by only a few discriminating clock collectors.

We have proudly created a new name for the clock, namely "JEWELER'S GRANDFATHER CLOCK," and innovated a clock featuring today's Grandfather clock's most important element – the triple chime movement – and yesteryear's Jeweler's Regulator's unique cabinet design and the fascinating mercury pendulum. We further added the matching hand carved designs to the base of the clock.

This magnificent clock cabinet is made from carefully selected solid walnut. Rosewood veneers for the accents, hand crafted one piece at a time – deeply and meticulously hand carved swirls and scrolls, sanded, joined, stained in dark cherry, hand rubbed, hand finished – for the lustrous finish from top finial to the bottom of the base. Then sparkling three piece beveled glass to the door and side were fitted in.

The Kieninger's best cable wound triple chime movement with three gleaming brass weights is set for the most reliable timekeeping. The genuine white porcelain dial, which displays classic black Roman numerals, is trimmed with brass bezel. The ever gently swinging authenticated mercury pendulum holds four hand bubble-cut crystal jars with simulated mercury, fitted to heavy brass casings and secured by two side steel rods.

Each clock will be personalized with owner's name and date of purchase on a solid brass plate. An heirloom to be cherished by the generations to come. 85 1/8"H x 24 1/4"W x 13 7/8"D
